

Foodservice distributor adds NYC office

A new midtown Manhattan sales office for J. Kings Food Service Professionals is open and is expected to help the foodservice distributor expand its presence in New York City, according to a news release.

The company's headquarters remain in Holtsville, Long Island, where it has been for almost 40 years.

Executive vice president of sales John McElgun said in the announcement of the Manhattan office that its central location in walking distance from Columbus Circle should help J. Kings further develop its sales team.

Chief customer officer John King said in the announcement the new offices at 240 W. 55th St. will be a great benefit in terms of meeting with manufacturers and vendor partners. The savings in travel time alone is expected to improve the company's bottom line.

The new offices include conference and presentation facilities as well as a sampling room.
